Ashton Raggatt McDougall consortium wins Riverbank masterplan contract

Updated 18 March 2011

A consortium led by Ashton Raggatt McDougall and including Taylor Cullity Lethlean and Aurecon has won the contract to create the masterplan for Adelaide's Riverbank Precinct.

"Unleashing the potential of the Riverbank Precinct will make a considerable contribution forging Adelaide's identity as a 21st Century city," says SA Infrastructure Minister, Patrick Conlon.

"The Riverbank Precinct Master Plan comes at a time when Adelaide is rapidly evolving into a city with an enormous future.

"The Riverbank is one of the most underutilised visual identities of South Australia and seeing it reach its potential as a cultural and social hub has always been high on this Government's agenda."

Minister Conlon said he had great confidence the successful consortium had the experience and track record to bring out the best the precinct has to offer.

AMR have completed internationally renowned design work and were also commissioned to prepare the Master Plan for Melbourne Docklands and the Perth Waterfront. Taylor Cullity Lethlean is the urban designer of the North Terrace upgrade.

ARM is led by highly regarded SA architect, Professor Ian McDougall.
